DALTON FORMALLY CHOSEN COUNCILMAN

At the City Council meeting held last Monday evening, Arthur J. Dalton was officially installed as a member of the City Council, to succeed T. F. O'Rourk, who recently tendered his resignation, he having accepted a position out of the city.

A number of residents of Daly City were present at the meeting, and Mr. Dalton's appointment seemed to meet with the approval of all. Councilman Dalton has been a very prominent resident of Daly City for many years, and is a well known and successful realtor.

Lieutenant John F. Coyne of the San Francisco Fire Department, and Casare Rastani, proprietor of the Geneva and Sunnydale Nursery, presented Councilman Dalton with a gorgeous basket of flowers. A large bouquet of carnations was also presented to the newly installed Councilman by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beeson.

The following letter received by Mayor H. H. Smith from T. F. O'Rourk, former Councilman, was read:

"I had hoped to be present at the meeting this evening and have a chance to say a few words to you men of the City Council, my good old friends; to say to you and those present just how much I cherish the pleasant memories of my association with such a fine bunch of good, loyal old pals.

"I just wanted to tell the good people of Daly City of my appreciation of the confidence they placed in me, and the loyal support they gave me through all those years. Just to try to say in the best way that I could, how grateful I am to them for giving me the great pleasure which has been mine for many years—the pleasure of being of service to the people and the city I love so well.

"I also wanted to extend my sincere thanks to all the employees of the city administration for their co-operation and good work, for without that co-operation we would have been unable to accomplish all that we have.

"I also wanted the opportunity to compliment the board on what I consider excellent judgment in their choice of Arthur Dalton to fill the vacancy, and to be present to congratulate Arthur and give him my best wishes, and to tell him what a fine bunch of fellows he is going to be associated with.

"But I can't be there, so I will depend on you to deliver my message. I can't find the words to express myself just as I would like to, so I'll ask you to say it for me. Make it as stong as you like, and then it goes double."

A communication was received from the California State Automobile Association, asking for a traffic officer to patrol Mission street and School street on Sundays and holidays. This request was referred to the police committee for investigation.

The publicity committee reported that the sign on the top of the reservoir that will advertise Daly City to aerial navigation has been completed in letters 24x12 feet.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company asked for permission to install service poles on the new block of Irvington street, permission being granted.

The library committee reported that 2,600 books were issued last month and a number of new volumes were added.

Officer Otto Schramm announced that he expected to secure the position for which he had applied to the State Traffic Bureau, and Chief Doyle was instructed to appoint Edward Heim as a member of the Daly City police force when Mr. Schramm has secured his new position. Mr. Heim has been a resident of Daly City for many years. He has served as a volunteer fireman, and is well known and very popular.

Chief Doyle was instructed to enforce the law regarding machines parked on sidewalks in front of residences.

This was one of the best get-together City Council meetings in a long while. Mayor Smith called on every one present for a few words, and all expressed their approval of the two new appointees, and praised the members of the Council for their many progressive moves.

RAVE GETS THREE MONTHS IN PRISON

Superior Judge G. H. Buck decided last Tuesday morning that Carl F. Rave, 52 year old carpenter, must go to jail for the next three months and pay a $100 fine for distributing birth control literature in Daly City.

Following his sentence by Justice of the Peace Ellis C. Johnson, Rave appealed to the Superior Court. Buck upheld the lower court's sentence. Rave was arrested by Policeman Otto Schramm on January 31, and has been at liberty on $500 cash bail.

These annual theatre parties staged by the volunteer firemen of Daly City have in the past been attended by such large crowds that you are advised to secure your tickets early, and avcid missing the treat of the season.

CHARGES POLITICS CAUSE OF REMOVAL

Petty politics and the wounded pride of a politician were given by Superintendant Frank A. Flynn of Mills Field as the cause for his summary removal last Monday by a vote of 14 to 1 by the San Francisco board of supervisors. On the other hand Chairman Milo F. Kent of the Supervisors' Airport committee charged Flynn with "inefficiency, insubordination and dereliction of duty," and was sustained in his charges by the supervisors. For the present Bartlett Stephens, assistant superintendent under Flynn, will remain in charge. Flynn's removal does not become effective until next Monday, April 1.

LOCAL SCOUT TROOP IS MAKING PROGRESS

During the past month Troop 103, Boy Scouts, of Daly City, has been making remarkable progress. Under the leadership of Carl R. Rehbock and L. Parlin Estes the membership is increasing. Mr. Estes, who has been acting as assistant Scoutmaster, has been compelled to give up that post because of his many business and social activities. However, in the future he will act as Carl Rehbock's advisor, and the members of the troop expect that he will visit them occasionally. It is believed that Al Ennis will be promoted to the position of assistant Scoutmaster because of his many past proofs of being capable of handling boys.

Troop 103 meets in the Methodist church, and heartily welcomes visitors who desire to see the true side of the splendid Scout movement.

A week ago, Troop 103, in conjunction with the rapidly growing Troop 149, spent a delightful Sunday hiking in the Millbrae highlands. The morning was spent in playing baseball. During the game dark clouds cast their shadow over the boys, so that they were forced to leave for home when a sudden shower dampened their spirits. The rain quickly passed away, but it was decided it would be better if they were all nearer their homes in case of a squall. The baseball game was completed in Daly City, and the reaminder of the afternoon was spent playing games.

The two troops harmonize together very well, and many hikes and good times are being planned for the future enjoyment of the boys.

The parents of boys who are of Scouting age are requested to urge their sons to visit their local troops. we are of the firm belief that the boys will join of their own accord after viewing the Boy Scouts in action.

CALVARY BAPTIST MISSION PRESENTS EASTER PROGRAM

A record attendance is expected Easter Sunday morning to witness the Easter program arranged by the Sunday school, at Calvary Baptist Mission, 5724 Mission street. Every one is urged to attend the morning service. An appropriate Easter message will be given by the pastor. There will be no evening service at the Mission, as the congregation desires to be present at the First Baptist church to witness the baptism of the seven candidates from Calvary Mission.

At 4 a. m. those desiring to attend the sunrise service at Mt. Davidson will meet at the Mission and go in a body.

COLMA FIREMEN'S PICNIC SCHEDULED FOR APRIL 21

The members of the Colma Volunteer Fire Department have begun preparations for their third annual picnic, which is to be held on Sunday, April 21, at Lovchen Garden. Those who attended last year's picnic will remember that it was one of the most successful and enjoyable events of the season, with entertainment for young and old. And no doubt all will be looking forward eagerly to April 21, and will be with the firemen to enjoy a splendid outing.

Tickets have been printed, excellent music has been selected, and other preparations are being made for a day of enjoyment.

The committee in charge promise that this year's picnic will eclipse in every way any outing held in this section in years. The public is invited. The admission to Lovchen Garden will be 50 cents—and what a splendid time you will have for the small sum invested.

LOCAL BALL TEAM WINS TWO GAMES

The Daly City Merchants defeated Meyers Saftey Switch, 11 to 1, and Humbolt Evening High, 16 to 3, at the Jefferson Union high school field last Sunday. Owing to a mistake in booking, two teams put in appearance, both expecting to play a game of baseball, so the home boys took them obth on. Both games were easy going for the Daly City boys, who them both on. Both games were easy the fast semi-pro. teams.

The hitting of the home boys was a feature of both games, with Maloney, a new outfielder, Anderson, and Cruchoff leading the attack. Maloney gathered four doubles. The two brothers, B. Strand and F. Strand, worked the first game, while our veterans, Hawley and Mike Reardon, performed in the second game. Both pitchers turned in shut-out ball.

Next Sunday being Easter, the boys have decided there will be no game, but will be right at it again the week after. McMullins has promised us some real games from now on.

BRIDGE CRASH NOT FAULT OF COUNTY

San Mateo county is not responsible for the collapse of the old wooden bridge over San Francisquito creek, near Palo Alto, on Thursday of last week, according to Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey.

Supervisors Hickey of South San Francisco and Manuel Francis of Half Moon Bay searched the county records last Monday at the court house in Redwood City and found that San Mateo county has never assumed any responsibility for the bridge or the road leading to it.

At the time the bridge was built 41 years ago, the Santa Clara county board of supervisors officially abandoned the old county road on the Santa Clara county side connecting with San Mateo county. The San Mateo county supervisors refused to abandon this road, as they wished the bridge constructed at that point some 100 yards from the present bridge site.

Wishing to divert traffic from the campus, Stanford University provided funds and had constructed the present road, which connects with Santa Cruz avenue, and the bridge which which collapsed last week.

San Mateo county continued to the present day to refuse to accept the road and bridge as a part of the county road system.

For years San Mateo county has had money in a special fund for construction of a new bridge, in conjunction with Santa Clara county, at the old site. Several weeks ago the local board agreed to construct such a span, providing it would be put on the old site.

SCOUT JAMBOREE TO BE HELD MAY 4

The annual San Mateo county Boy Scout jamboree will be held on May 4 at the Sequoia high school, Redwood City.

Plans for the big all-day affair which is expected to attract more than a thousand San Mateo county Boy Scouts, was made last week at a meeting of the executive committee of the San Mateo Boy Scout council held at the county headquarters in Burlingame.

STOPS BUILDING OF S. P. SPUR TRACK

The Southern Pacific's track layers were halted again yesterday in the construction of a 6,000 foot spur track across the marshes on the outskirts of San Mateo.

Acting on instructions given him at an executive session of the San Mateo trustees, City Manager Oscar Weissgerber obtained a restraining order prohibiting the railroad from crossing two sewer lines which lie between the Southern Pacific main road and section of spur track already built.

The order was issued by Superior Judge George H. Buck at Redwood City and is returnable next Thursday morning, April 4.

The court order was returned just in time, for a crew of 100 men started work on the track again yesterday.

Southern Pacific officials denied the sewers in question are owned by the city of San Mateo.

Yesterday's court order is the second issued this week against the Southern Pacific. The Western Pacific obtained an order from the Federal Court in San Francisco restraining the Southern Pacific from crossing its right of way with any other spur tracks.

City Manager Weissgerber of San Mateo last Monday ordered the Southern Pacific Company to stop work on the building of a spur track across the right of way of the Bay Shore highway in East San Mateo, while city officials appealed to the State Highway Commission.

About 1,200 feet of the track had been constructed since Saturday afternoon, the crews workig all Sunday, city officials said.

Weissgerber took his legal stand on existence of a sewer right of way across acreage in the southeast portion of the city toward which the tracks were being built. The new railroad does not extend over San Mateo streets but passes south of the mapped portion of the Emma Rose estate and is designed according to blueprints, to connect with the main line at Leslie.

City officials of San Mateo see a move on the part of the Southern Pacific to beat the Western Pacific to entry into the great area of industrial lands along San Mateo's waterfront, now served by the new San Mateo-Hayward bay bridge.

The application of the Western for permission to build a Peninsula line, now in Washington, is based primarily on the fact that the Western, running east of the Bay Shore highway, would serve the area, whereas the Southern Pacific will not be allowed by state authorities to cross the highway, it was pointed out.

It was also said that the Rose interests deeded a right of way across their unmapped lands to the Southern Pacific last week and that the track building began Saturday afternoon after the closing of courts. It proceeded throughout Sunday.

BLUE MONDAY AND TRAFFIC SMASHUPS

"Blue Monday," the term applied generally to the week-end vacationist's indigo-hued attitude toward life in general on Monday morning, is given a new significance by the statistical department of the Division of Motor Vehicles.

Records compiled by the statisticians for a three-month period indicated that almost as many traffic smash-ups of a fatal or near fatal nature occur on Monday as occur on Saturday or Sunday, despite the fact that travel is always heaviest on the two last mentioned days.

The three-month compilation reveals 1,050 accidents involving death or injury occurred on Monday, actually exceeding Saturday with 1,005 and only exceeded slightly by Sunday with 1,057.

Week-end "fag" from motor trips, loss of sleep and "hangovers" from Sunday night parties and hurry to get back to work are among the causes blamed by the division's officials for "Blue Monday's" toll of accidents.

Incidentally, the division offers the record as another reason why motorists should be doubly cautious on "blue Monday."

"Watch your driving on Monday. There is less traffic probably but more accidents. Hundreds of persons stay at week end resorts until early Monday morning and then make a mad dash to get back to work. Many others are worn out by long week-end trips and are not as trustworthy a the wheel as under ordinary conditions."

VETERANS MAY YET OBTAIN INSURANCE

"Many veterans of the World war in California do not know that they may still obtain U. S. government insurance," Irwin T. Quinn, state chairman of the American Legion's Rehabilitation Commission, declares in a notice sent broadcast over the state and calling attention to a recent amendment to the World war veterans' act, passed at the request of the American Legion.

"U. S. government insurance is for veterans who served in the military and naval forces of the United States during the period of the World war, April 6, 1917, to July 2, 1921, and who applied, or were eligible to apply, for the term or converted insurance," he said. "They must now be in good health. The maximum of the U. S. government insurance allowed to a veteran is $10,000 and the minimum is $1,000. It may be had in multipless of $500.

"In many instances, a veteran carried a policy for a time and then surrendered it for the cash value. The amount of insurance that may be taken now is reduced by the amount of insurance so surrendered.

"The following are the steps that a veteran should follows in applying for government insurance:

"He must supply satisfactory evidence to the U. S. Veterans' Bureau that he is in good health. This is not a departure but required of the veteran who obtains a policy from any reliable insurance company.

"The veteran must fill out the printed application for the plan and amount of insurance desired. These application forms are similar to those used in obtaining policies from any established company.

"The veteran must submit sufficent remittance to cover at least the first monthly premium on the amount and the plan of insurance applied for. Premiums are payable monthly on the first day of each month, but may be paid quarterly, semi-annually or annually at a saving.

"The application forms of U. S. government insurance and information may be obtained form a regional office of the United States Veterans' Bureau, from the central offices of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, Washington, D. C., and in many cases from the service officer of a Legion Post.

"One of the splendid things in connection with carrying U. S. government life insurance policies is that there are no restrictions. The insured may designate any person, firm, corporation or legal entity as beneficiary under his policy, either individually or as a trustee.

"U. S. government insurance policies are free from the usual life insurance restrictions as to residence, modes of transportation, occupation and military or naval service."

Out of the wreck of the San Francisquito bridge in which sixteen persons nearly lost their lives Thursday night of last week, will probably come a settlement of the dispute between San Mateo and Santa Clara counties and construction of a new span.

DALY CITY THEATRE AGAIN LEADS WITH BIG PRODUCTIONS

There is another big week of attractions in store for the patrons of the Daly City Theatre, where all of the bigger and better film attractions of the world's leading producers are being shown under the policy of "see them better for less," opening with tonight's big stage and screen attractions. On the screen they will have "Detectives," with that incomparable pair of fun-makers, Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, together with Educational's special thrill picture, "The Sky Ranger." Felix the Cat and the Paromunt News will round out the screen features. On the stage "Dumbell" will hold forth with his big Country Store and Vaudeville Show.

For Saturday, playing a matinee and two performances, the Daly City Theatre will offer a big double feature show, together with the usual specially selected short subjects. Neil Hamilton, Francis X. Bushman and Otis Harlan have the leading roles of that big thriller, "Grip of the Yukon," while Ranger, the dog star, will be seen in "Breed of Courage," one of the fastest of action picture plays. Other attractions include the comedy "Believe it or Not," and the News. At the matinee episode nine of the serial "The Vanishing West" will be shown. Especially for the kiddies at the matinee the Euclid Candy Company have prepared "Love Nest" candies which will be presented to the kiddies as they leave the theatre.

Sunday means "whoopee" at the Daly City, when George X. White, familiarly known as "Snooky," lets loose with his riotously funny farce comedy with his big cast of star players in a glorious array of song, dance and fun, called "Sparkling Bits from Musical Hits." On the screen Lila Lee and Cornelius Keefe will be seen in "The Adorable Cheat," a delightful comedy special that is a rib tickler for fair. There will be an array of exceptional short subjects on the same bill.

Tuesday night will be gala night at the Daly City Theatre, when there will be a presentation of "The Chanters Chorus," and aggregation of sixty male voices in the musical treat of the year. For this attraction there will not be any advance in the admission price and the theatre promises to be packed to the doors. Our advice would be that you go early, for no doubt the capacity of the theatre will be taxed. A brilliant array of flim attractions will also be shown.

In keeping with the policy of the theatre of bigger and better attractions for less, the Daly City Theatre announces the massive vaudeville and motion picture show of the Volunteer Fire Department of Daly City for Wednesday night, April 17th, when the theatre will be taken over by the firemen in their annual theatre party. There will be five big professional acts on the stage, together with a glorious array of screen attractions. There will be two performances, starting at 7 and 9 p. m. Do your bit for the fire department, which is a volunteer organization, and purchase your tickets early. Tickets may now be had from any of the boys of the department, or at the theatre box office.

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Definite clues which indicate that the old S. F. B. Morse home was razed by the incendiary actions of an illegal occupant and which will ultimately lead to the arrest of a "person with a tell-tale foreign accent" are being followed up by Claude Hirschey, Hillsborough chief of police.

Bands of Burlingame and San Mateo high schools will compete with those of other schools from all parts of northern California in the band contest which will be a feature of the ninth annual music week celebration to be held May 5 to 11.

Thrown to the pavement when two automobiles collided head-on in Colma last Sunday, three San Mateo and Redwood City men, and four other persons are today recovering from injuries which sent them to San Francisco and South City hospitals.

Christian William Hanson, who had lived in San Mateo for over thirty years, died last Monday.

Robert C. Thackara, who was recently appointed chairman of the lumber conference, will be remembered as a resident of Burlingame from 1915 to late in 1917.

Because the suit was filed more than two years after the accident Superior Judge George H. Buck dismissed the action brought by the Peninsula Rapid Transit company of Burlingame against A. Pellegrini and others.

The sunshine and the hope of seeing Colonel Lindbergh drew a record crowd to Mills field Sunday. Hundreds of cars were lined along the Bay Shore highway extending from the South San Francisco city limits to the Burlingame city limits.

Leonard Read, former secretary-manager of the Burlingame chamber of commerce, has just tendered his resignation as secretary-manager of the Palo Alto chamber of commerce.

Snow fell on King's mountain San Mateo county, Sunday afternoon. A light blanket of snow remained on the ground for the greater part of the afternoon.

James Olgia, arrested at South San Francisco for reckless driving was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 or spend 50 days in jail. He was unable to pay the fine and was lodged in jail.

Another new church for San Carlos is now under construction. The latest church building is the first Catholic church.

Some 1,013 passengers were carried from Mills field in 580 take-offs during the past week, officials of the field stated.

The Welfare Shop at San Mateo, started as a war aid and which has now been running for fourteen years, will close its doors this month, according to announcement of Mrs. H. S. Dana, who has been in charge since its opening.

San Mateo's fire insurance rate has been reduced 10 per cent by the Board of Fire Underwriters of the Pacific, due to improvements in fire fighting service and a material reduction in fire losses, it is announced.

California will not have a daylight svaing law this year. Farmers, trades unions and movie producers defeated the advocates of this measure in a hard-fought joust over the bill in senate judiciary committee. The bill was killed for the present session by the decisive vote of 11 to 2.

The Michel & Pfeffer Iron Works has purchased a 13-acre tract just north of Mills Field on the Bay Shore highway where the first unit of a new industrial plant is to be started immediately.

The Santa Clara Valley blossom festival, scheduded for last Saturday and Sunday at Saratoga, was postponed for one week on account of weather conditions.

LONDON GETS ITS FIRST PUBLIC DIAL EXCHANGE

The Holborn exchange is the first automatic telephone exchange to be cut over for public use in the city of London. Although Holborn, which is largely a business man's exchange, is the first public automatic exchange to be put in operation in London, the exchange known as Official which connects government departments and also takes calls to those departments from public exchanges, has been worked automatically since 1912.

Gradually other exchanges in London will be converted over, but it is not expected that complete automatic exchanges will be in existence throughout the city until the beginning of 1940 and 1950.

In its farm relief efforts Congress might at least restore the free garden seeds.

Nobody reads editorials, some say. But just bawl somebody out in one and see what happens.

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

Calculated Frenzy?

A new way of avoiding paying for one's dinner was practiced in Paris recently, according to the London Morning Post. When the customer's bill was presented to him he went off his head and had to be removed to the nearest hospital under control. It is a matter for speculation whether the composition of the menu or of the bill was the cause of the diner's attack of frenzy.

Suicides in Europe

Disappointment in love stands at the bottom of the suicide causes in Europe, which account for the death of 50,000 annually. Money troubles and ill health account for the largest number of the self-slain. Hungary and Czechoslovakia lead Europe in suicides, with 26 per 100,000 persons annually.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Her Objection

"Why don't you encourage the attentions of Mr. Penniwise. He is very steady and economical?"

"His economy," answered Miss Cayenne, "is my objection. He is the kind of man who will order a $15 dinner and leave a 25-cent tip."

Nothing More

"You can't win any money on the races."

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

If Back Hurts Flush Kidneys

Drink Plenty of Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

New Rose Plants

A simple method of increasing rose bushes for one who does not care to make slips is found by bending down a long branch until it can be partially buried in the earth. If it is pinned down in this position it will take root at a joint below ground and will soon become firmly established, after which it can be cut from the parent plant.

The method has the added advantage of the nourishing of the new plant from the parent plant while it is growing.

Observations From Height

The highest trustworthy meteorological observation that has been made was at Pavia, Italy, December 7, 1911, in a sounding balloon, which rose 35,000 meters, or 21.77 miles. The record height of an observation from a captive balloon is 9,200 meters, or 5.7 miles. A captive balloon may be sent only as high as the length of the wires or ropes holding it.

CONNIE MACK IN HIS 29TH SEASON

McGraw Has Won More Pennants Than Manager of A's.

This year is Connie Mack's twenty-ninth season with the Athletics and John McGraw's twenty-seventh with the Giants.

At sixty-seven Connie Mack begins another term with his Athletics, a club he directed even before the best days of Chief Bender, Eddie Plank, Eddie Coombs, Amos Strunk, Eddie Collins, Frank Baker, Rube Oldring and others of the great old Philadelphia machine that swept the baseball world in three of the four years between 1910 and 1913.

McGraw, Mack's junior by eleven years, has been showing the Giants the way to preseason headquarters ever since 1903. His career has been even more remarkable than that of the A's chieftain, as the Little Napoleon has won ten pennants to Mack's six. Both have three world's championships to their credit.

Perhaps these old masters of the game are not as spry as when they first assumed charge of their clubs, but they have the enthusiasm of managers half their age.

McGraw is with his Giants at San Antonio, his bulky form inclosed in much yardage of flannels, calling instructions to his hopefuls and taking a bat occasionally to shoot a grounder or a fly out to a player under special scrutiny.

Over at Fort Myers, Fla., is the dignified Mack, dressed in mufti, with the inevitable piece of program or newspaper in hand, wigwagging to this player or that how to play for certain types of batters.

Connie Mack became manager of the Athletics in 1901. His team won pennants in 1902, 1905, 1910, 1911, 1913 and 1914 and world's championships in 1910, 1911 and 1913.

McGraw directed the Giants for the first time in 1903. His teams captured flags in 1904, 1905, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1917, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924, together with world titles in 1905, 1921 and 1922.

"Another Mathewson" in Big Show From Bucknell

Almost a generation ago Bucknell sent Christy Mathewson, baseball and football star, into the National league. Matty had a hard time for a while, New York sending him to Norfolk, only to get him back in a trade for Amos Rusie after Cincinnati had taken Matty for a trial.

Now comes Bucknell with "another Mathewson." The young man's name is Ed Halicki, and he is better known to followers of football than to those who are interested in college baseball.

Like Matty, Halicki was a great back, a fine kicker. Like Matty, Halicki has made his mark as a varsity hurler. And now comes the word that in June Halicki will report to the St. Louis Cardinals.

It's about time the colleges gave the majors a real pitcher. Varsity baseball has sent up quite a few first-rate fielders in recent years, but its contributions to the pitching ranks have been few and none too successful.

Wales to Sell Stable; Keeps Faithful Hunter

There is one horse in the stables of the prince of Wales that will never leave its royal master no matter how urgently his new responsibilities require the prince to abandon hunting

It is the hunter, "Just An Idea," which has won special affection, carrying the prince through six seasons without a single falter. This master of the hounds was unavailable only once, when it was laid up a few weeks after straining its back taking a fence.

The faithful hunter's retirement to the prince's farm at Lenton was disclosed in the catalogue announcing the sale of his hunters in view of his decision to curtail hunting activities. The catalogue read:

"Entire stud with exception of one old horse."

No Sleep for Guest in Abode of Cranks

John Sloan, the noted painter, told a story at a dinner in New York.

"Colonies are apt to get sot in their ways," he said. "This is true of the writing and painting colonies in Paris and New Mexico, and it is no less true of the colonies of retired business people in California and Florida and Atlantic City.

"In the Atlantic City colony the men are golf cranks. The women are auction cranks, and they never miss an auction in the boardwalk shops.

"A Philadelphia man spent the week-end at an Atlantic City cottage where his host and hostess were cranks of this kind. His bedroom was next to theirs, and he hardly got a wink of sleep, for all night long the golf crank husband kept yelling out in his dreams, 'Fore!' and instanly his auction-crank wife would scream, 'Four and a half!'"

Frog Snapped at Snapper

Among a consignment from South America received at the New York zoological garden recently was a large horned frog which is new to Doctor Ditmars. He said that the frog was the most unusual reptile he had seen in many years. It is 5½ inches long, of green bronze color and has horns. The keepers of the reptile house were warned that the newcomer was vicious, but because of its size they were not alarmed until they saw it jump at a photographer, barking very much like an angry dog as it did so. On investigation it was found that the frog had very strong jaws and teeth, and Doctor Ditmars said that it could no doubt inflict a very painful wound.

Norway Bans Big Estates

The large percentage of small farms owned by the farmers has demonstrated the success in the effort to discourage big estates in Norway. This is credited to the unique law that makes it possible for a farmer, or his descendants, to repurchase, within a certain time, any property that circumstances have forced him to sell.

YOU CAN'T DYE with Good Intentions

You can get results—after a fashion—with any old dye; but to do work you are proud of takes real anilines. That's why we put them in Diamond Dyes. They contain from three to five times more than other dyes on the market! Cost more to make? Surely. But you get them for the same price as other dyes.

Next time you want to dye, try them. See how easy it is to use them. Then compare the results. Note the absence of that re-dyed look; of streaking or spotting. See that they take none of the life out of the cloth. Observe how the colors keep their brilliance through wear and washing. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree Diamond Dyes are better dyes.

The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye, for silk or wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. When you buy—remember this. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

ORIGIN OF EASTER

Easter Sunday, universally observed by Christians in commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus, was not originally a Christian festival, but rather an outgrowth of the Jewish Passover, it is claimed.

The word Easter is a survival of old Teutonic mythology, from Eostre, the Ango-Saxon goddess of spring. Among the Romance nations—France, Spain and Italy—the name is derived from the latin "pascha," this in turn being drawn from the Hebrew name of the Passover.

No trace of the observance of Easter as a Christian festival is found in the New Testament, nor in the writings of the apostolic fathers of the church.

The celebration of Easter originally took place at the end of the Jewish Paschal fast, regardless of the day of the week, but Gentile Christians early adopted the custom of commemorating the crucifixion on Friday and the resurrection on the following Sunday, as we do now. There were at first several different methods of calculating the date of Easter.

It is recorded that in one year no less than three different dates were observed by various churches—March 21, April 18 and April 25. Controversies over the date of Easter were among the most bitter of any disputes in the history of Christianity.

Finally in 325 the Council of Nice decreed that Easter should fall on the first Sunday after the first full moon which occurs on or next after March 21. This does not necessarily refer to the actual full moon, however, but is determined by certain rather complicated calendar rules.

Many interesting popular customs have arisen at various times in connection with the celebration of Easter, of which that of sending Paschal or Easter eggs is the most widespread. This is also a survival of past ages, the egg having been to the ancients a symbol of immortality.

TWO DAREDEVILS

Two daredevils performed on a Florida beach a few days ago. One of them, Major H. O. D. Segrave of England, drove at the rate of 231 miles an hour, breaking all automobile speed records. The other, Lee Bible, an American, in trying to beat Major Segrave's performance, struck a sand dune and was killed when he had reached a speed of 202 miles an hour. A news photographer engaged in taking a moving picture of Bible's exploit was struck by the car and also killed.

While the practical benefits of such performances are perhaps negligible, human beings must admire the courage of those who engage in them. Walking across Niagara on a tightrope, going over the falls in a barrel, doing an outside loop in an airplane, and similar stunts are in the same category. If the performer is successful, we applaud; if he loses his life, we often feel that he was a fool.

Whatever our reactions may be, it is undeniable that the daredevil spirit is in the long run accountable for much that is worth while. Some exercise it in purely spectacular fashion for the applause of the moment, while others risk their lives in the interest of science and progress. In the latter class we may place Peary, Amundsen, Byrd and the many intrepid explorers whose daring feats have added to the world's knowledge.

Lindbergh is in the same class. Had he lost his life in his apparently foolhardy flight to Paris, he would have been forgotten by this time. His great skill, combined with a generous measure of luck, made him the outstanding hero of the air.

So, hats off to the daredevils, whether they win or lose.

A PAIR OF BABY SHOES

Among the treasures in the Canadian archives at Ottawa are a pair of baby shoes once worn by James Wolfe. Most American school children have read in their histories the story told of how General Wolfe recited Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" the night before the battle of Quebec, and said that he had rather have been the author of that poem than to have "the glory of beating the French tomorrow."

He did beat the French on the morrow on the Plains of Abraham at Quebec, which victory wrested Canada from the French, but Wolfe died on the field after being thrice wounded. The opposing French commander, Montcalm, was also mortally wounded in the battle.

Wolfe was one of the most skillful and daring commanders who ever wore the British uniform. He was a commissioned officer at the age of 14, became a captain at 17, and a major shortly thereafter. He was a brigadier general when he yielded up his life for England at the age of 31, after executing one of the most daring exploits in military annals.

The story of that exploit is too long to relate here, but if our readers will look it up they will understand why that pair of baby shoes is so highly prized and treasured by the Dominion authorities in Ottawa.

TOO MUCH OIL

Crude petroleum production in the United States reached a new record peak early in March, with an output of more than 2,700,000 barrels a day. This highest production of all time was attained in spite of the partial success of agreements among operators to limit production in some of the newly developed fields.

This unprecedented flood of oil came just as the Federal Oil Conservation Board, composed of Secretaries of the Interior, Commerce, War and Navy, made its third report on conditions in the industry, and recommended further co-operative effort to limit production as a means of conserving this valuable national resource.

Over production of crude oil through unrestricted drilling has had a demoralizing effect upon the industry, besides tending toward waste, with little corresponding benefit to the public, because the cost of storing the surplus oil has to a large extent offset the lower price paid at the wells.

Restrictive measures by the oil producers themselves appears to offer the only hope for the prevention of further enormous waste.

MEN NOW STYLE SLAVES

For many generations women have been ridiculed as being slaves to fashion. In the days of hoopskirts and bustles this ridicule may have been justified—but what of today?

We joke about short skirts and the generally scant apparel in which the modern women array themselves, yet mere man may well envy their emancipation from the burdensome habiliments of the past.

Dr. Mulford, president of the New Jersey Medical Society, hands the men some advice in a recent statement, in which he says:

"If men would abandon collars, and wear V-necked shirts with short sleeves, knee length pants, short socks, and display bare legs to give the sun's ultra-violet rays a chance at their bodies, they would soon develop a wonderful physique and banish many ailments from which they now suffer."

But men will do nothing of the sort. Only the most venturesome among them dare to go about the streets in shirt sleeves, even when the thermometer registers 90 or above.

TREMENDOUS FIRE WASTE

The apparent disregard of fire waste by otherwise estimable and intelligent citizens, is a peculiar phase of our national life.

It is nothing more than common sense to realize that when we burn half a billion dollars worth of property in a year, to say nothing of the lives lost, several times that amount of money has been totally destroyed in time and business lost and upkeep of fire departments.

There can be no question but what this tremendous waste presents a serious menace to our prosperity. In no way can it actually be replaced, least of all by an insurance company, which must collect at least as much money as it pays out.

The principal causes of fire are carelessness, ignorance, poor building construction and inadequate protective facilities.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters and many other organizations, private and civic, through Fire Prevention weeks and all year 'round activities, make intensive efforts to educate the people. It is clearly our own fault if the lessons are not heeded.

We lead the rest of the world in most things, and, unfortunately, we lead likewise in the amount of fire waste. It is not an enviable record.

Lawyer defending a dog which bit an enforcement officer declared the animal was only putting teeth in the law.

The third successful ascape ever known from Devil's Island, notorious French penal colony off the coast of Venezuela, was recently made by Dr. Pierre Bougrat, a life prisoner for murder.

We've heard of a bad man's threat to make somebody "eat his own gun." Toronto bandits varied the procedure by actually making a victim swallow his own knife.

WORLD'S LARGEST STORE

It may be surprising to some to know that what will be the largest store in the world is not to be the boast of London, nor Paris, nor New York City. It will be the great new store building being planned for T. Eaton & Co., of Toronto.

According to the designs of the architects, this massive structure will have a total of 4,196,158 square feet of floor space, about twice as much as the largest store in the United States, which is that of Marshall Field & Co.

The Eaton building will have a tower rising 670 feet above the street level, thus rivaling New York's skyscrapers in height. It will be a structure of which Toronto and all Canada may well be proud.

Famous last words: "My wife never comes into my private office without knocking."

JURY INVESTIGATES HILLSIDE ACCIDENT

L. Paoletti, Colma ranch hand, died from a fractured skull, sustained when he was struck by a car driven by Mario Leveroni, also of Colma, on Sunday, March 10, on the Hillside boulevard near South San Francisco, according to the verdict returned by the coroner's jury. No recommendations of any kind were made by the jury after they reviewed the evidence as submitted by Joe Cavalli, Lawndale police chief and Leveroni's girl companion.

Paoletti was walking on the side of the boulevard and suddenly "dashed in front of the car," according to the girl's testimony. Leveroni refused to testify. The speed of the car was estimated at 30 miles per hour, and skid marks showed on the pavement for 30 feet.

Paoletti's mangled body was rushed to the South San Francisco hospital. He died at 11 a. m. Monday without regaining consciousness. Dr. M. D. Lessard, who dressed Paolletti's wounds, listed twelve injuries, including a basal fracture of the skull, a smashed left leg, multiple fractures of the ribs, a fractured jaw and deep lacerations of the head and body.

A CHINESE CONSCIENCE

In spite of Bert Harte's famous rhyme in which he declared that "for ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain the Heathen Chinese is peculiar," there are a good many honest Chinese, possibly as large a percentage as among other nationalities.

At any rate, a rather unusual quality of honesty was found in one not long ago, when the Rockefeller Foundation established a hospital in Pekin to be manned by a native staff of doctors. The headship of one of the hospital's departments was offered to a young Chinese physician, who replied to the offer as follows:

"If this offer is made because of my ability as a scientise, I accept, but if promotion is proposed because I am a Chinese, I must decline."

This desire to stand on his own merits, rather than accept a position because of his nationality, was most commendable. How many Americans would decline a position on such grounds? Did you ever hear of one refusing a postmastership, for example, even though he knew it was offered because of his political activity rather than real ability?

It is rather odd that follows who are not superstitious will remind one that it isn't necessary to light three cigarettes from the same match.

PROSPERITY AND FIRE

According to a compilation by the New York Journal of Commerce, insured fire losses last year totaled $301,267,560, a minimum for the period from 1920 to 1928.

"While these figures are commendable for the reduction shown, they are in no wise justifiable," the report says, "and represent an economic waste of national resources that constitutes a serious drain even upon a profligate nation. The extent of this waste may be seen from the figures of the fire losses of the past 50 years, representing $10,261,472,405 in the aggregate as to property values destroyed."

In 1926 our total fire losses were the highest on record and it noteworthy that they have been appreciably reduced during the last two years. There is, however, little cause for conceit as yet. It is only our tremendous prosperity that offsets so inexcusable a waste.

Over 80 per cent of all fires are attributable to carelessness. Various organizations are making intensive efforts to educate the people in fire prevention. And until the lessons are heeded, our fire loss must continue to be a serious blot on our record of prosperity and progress.

HOW MANY ARE A FEW?

In a somewhat light vein the Christian Science Monitor recently asked and discussed the question, "How Many Are a Few?" No conclusion was reached, as there appeared to be no definite authority which might be cited to establish the answer.

Later a correspondent in Newark called attention to the fact that a small Scotch boy had found the answer centuries ago, according to a story, which may be briefly related thus:

The boy was entitled to "a few apples" as a prize for memorizing more verses of scripture than any other member of his Sunday school class, whereupon the teacher gave him three apples. The boy demurred, asserting that he should have eight apples. Pressed for his authority, the lad triumphantly produced it from no less a source than Holy Writ, quoting I Peter, third chapter, 20th verse, in which it is said:

"Few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."

His contention being incontrovertible, the boy got his eight apples, And therefore, if anyone should ask, a few means eight.

Flagpole sitters appear to have no ambitions to stand high in their respective communities.

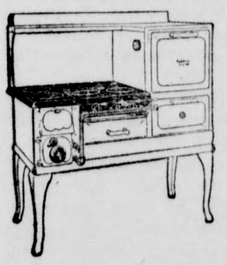
After all, what is the most important thing in baking?

Modern Gas Ranges are built to insure perfect baking

Is it measuring and mixing ingredients? Is it selecting certain ingredients? All Home Econimists know that after all, the most important thing is the correct oven temperature.

For almost anyone using care can measure and mix good ingredients accurately and follow a tested recipe. But in the baking—that's where all your best efforts meet the real test. Women have experienced this for long years.

Today, leading Home Economists are turning to a device that keeps the oven at any temperature. It is called the Oven Heat Control and is a part of the new Gas Range.



See these new Gas Ranges at your dealer's. Or phone or call at our office. We have a selected list of modern Gas Ranges that we recommend because we know they are good.

It showed unmistakable signs of entirely human investigation. At least a hand with the usual equipment of thumb and fingers has left more than one impression on it. . . .

Later: And now where are we? I am willing, even anxious, to accept Halliday's verdict, that the sounds we both heard in the library were due to an east wind blowing down the chimney, plus the settling and creaking of the old portion of the house.

But we have just returned from an inspection, in broad day, of the marks outside the boarded-up window of the den.

There is a complete imprint of the hand on it, and it shows a broad short thumb and a curved little finger. What is more, there is a complete absence of the usual whorls and ridges of the ordinary hand. One could take this imprint and put it side by side with the one in the bowl of putty. They are identical.

Halliday seems to have seen a great light from somewhere, but to me the situation is as absurd as it is maddening. It is as outrageous as that, out of some forgotten corner of my memory, I should have dug up a triangle within a circle, to find it cropping up soon after as the signature to a crime.

August 25.

Five days have passed since the murder, and we are apparently as far from its solution as ever.

What work is being done is now centering about the county detective bureau in the city. A deputy constable keeps up a more or less casual surveillance of the property during the day, but is careful to depart before twilight. The dragging of the bay has once more been stopped, and Benchley's idea of an unknown enemy of Bethel's has apparently been abandoned in favor of Gordon as the killer.

At the same time we are not without developments, of a sort.

Although he is reticent on the subject, Halliday seems to feel that the experiment the other night, incomplete as it was, negatives the theory that the man I saw escaped by the broken window in the library.

"Then where did he go?" I asked.

"That's the point," he said. "Where did he go? When we've answered that we'll have answered a number of things."

But he tells me, surprisingly enough, that he has taken up a sort of temporary residence in the house.

"Whoever tried to get in the other night may come back again," he says.

I have offered to stay with him, but not, I dare say, with any enthusiasm. But he declines with a smile.

"You are too psychic, Skipper!" he says.

But it is perfectly evident that he does not want me.

This morning, going unexpectedly into the boathouse, where this conversation took place, I found him sitting by his table, and spread out before him the bit of linen, the cipher, the broken lens and the top of the ether can which constituted our various exhibits before I was gently eliminated from the case. But he also had a box of figs and a hand mirror before him, and when I entered unexpectedly he was studying himself in the glass.

As he immediately asked me if I cared to go fishing, which I did not, I saw that he was not prepared to make any explanation. . . .

The other development, although it does not solve the crime, or touch on it, came to me through Lear today, and throws a new and interesting light on poor old Bethel himself.

Lear did not like his errand; he prefers a presumptuous skepticism to an irrational credulity, and knows no middle ground. Those things which lie beyond his understanding he refers to as "poppycock," a favorite word of his. And today he prefaced his business with a small lecture to me, taking me into the drive to deliver it.

"You don't look like a man who has been on a vacation," he began, surveying me. "I know you've had a bad time, but after all, it's no possible responsibility of yours."

"I rented him the house. And I knew I had no business to rent it to anybody."

"Poppycock!" he said, and cleared his throat.

He had fallen into step with me, but at that he stopped and faced me.

"Now, see here, Porter," he said. "There's a good bit of talk going around. Some of your friends are saying that you and Jane are laying the blame on some d—n fool nonsense about the house itself. That's poor hearing, and it's ridiculous into the bargain. The Morrison girl was not killed in the house."

"I'm not sure she wasn't. At any rate, he was. And I believe the same hand killed them both."

"But a human hand, of course? You're not going to say—"

"Oh, I admit that," I said. "But there are a lot of curious things. If you think the house is normal, spend a night there and see."

"Normal!" he snapped. "Of course the house is normal. It's the people in it who aren't." And warming to his subject: "You and Cameron should be locked up together. And Pettingill," he added.

Which brought him to Cameron, and his errand. . . .

Immediately on Cameron's return from the Adirondacks he had gone to bed with an infested hand, which had been torn by a fishhook, and had been too ill to look at the accumulation of mail. But the day before, although still very weak, he had gone through his letters, and there found one from Mr. Bethel, dated late in July.

In this letter Bethel recited various "abnormal conditions in the Twin Hollows house, and asked Cameron, at the earliest possible moment, to go out and investigate them.

"And he wants to come?" I asked Lear.

"I tell you he's been sick," Lear said impatiently. "He wants to know about showing it to the police. He doesn't want to be dragged in, if he can help it."

"You've seen it?"

"Yes. There's nothing in it except what I've told you."

"He doesn't describe these abnormal conditions?"

"No. But he said he had made some experiments of his own, and was anxious to have his results verified."

"Experiments? Using a red light?"

"He didn't say," Lear said, with some asperity. "A red light! What in heaven's name has a red light to do with the immortal soul?"

He enlarged on that savagely. Helena, he said, had been off in a corner saying, "om, om" to herself half the summer, and when she dozed off in so doing, would waken to claim that her astral body had been off on some excursion or other.

"I can't appeal to her reason," he said with a shrug of his thin shoulders, "but I have appealed to her decency. I've asked her if it is fair to intrude into the privacy every human individual is entitled to at times. But it's no good. She keeps a record, and I'm convinced it would jail her."

The only advice I could send Cameron was to use his own judgment concerning the letter. Personally, I do not see what value it has, save to corroborate my own ideas concerning the house. But it has suggested to me the advisability of asking Cameron to come here quietly and look the place over.

I rather think he wants to do so.

August 26.

All along, I have been impressed by the attitude of at least the summer public to our tragedies; as each one came it brought with it its temporary thrill; for a moment, one might say, the dancing stopped and a bit of drama was enacted on the stage. Then the curtain fell, the band struck up, and the whirl began again, with some inconsiderable of the dancers missing.

Poor Carroway's widow is working at one of the shore hotels, and has bobbed her hair. And a small boy with adenoids delivers our milk and chickens; I caught him this morning chalking up a triangle within a circle on one of the pillars of the gate.

The main house shut and empty, a new assistant keeper at the lighthouse, and perhaps a closed room and grief at the Morrison farmhouse—these are the only apparent scars left, to mark our summer's wounding.

I saw Larkin this morning. He believes that we may be able to sell the property as a hotel site; as this would insure destroying the house, it seems the best thing.

But one other change I have not recorded.

Watching Halliday as I do, affectionately and not too openly, I can see a very considerable change in him. He is like a man lit from within by some flame, of vengeance perhaps, or resolution certainly. And he is moody at times; his old gayety is gone. He has put me out of his confidence, not because he does not trust me, but because for some reason he is afraid of me.

And the same, I think, is largely true of Edith in the last day or two.

It is as though he said, in effect:

"Keep out. It is dangerous. I am willing to take a chance, but I want to know that the rest of you are safe."

Now and then, however, I gather something. Thus yesterday he said: "You have to remember this; we are not dealing with a criminal, but with an idea."

Again, he has asked me for Uncle Horace's letter, and has been apparently making a study of it.

Only along the lines of what I call the supernormal phenomena of the summer does he show his old openness, and there he is frankly puzzled. My decision not to call in Cameron has, I think, disappointed him. But my reasons are sound. Cameron's coming might result in unpleasant press publicity for us, and more than that, puts me where I do not intend to be placed, among the believers in spiritism.

He accepted that decision without comment. But shortly after he asked Edith for the letter from Evanston, and sat thinking over it for some time.

"Of course, with a little imagination," he said, "you might figure that these people were somehow let in on what happened here last year. But why Evanston?" And after a pause, following a train of thought:

"Of course I suppose, if you grant a spirit world, you have to grant that where time and space do not exist and only vibration counts—whatever that may mean—you could tune in Evanston as well as—well, as easily as you can on the radio."

But he got up soon after, saying that we were all crazy and he himself was the maddest of the lot, and went away.

August 27.

Livingstone is a curious chap; dapper, fastidious and taciturn. He is almost too much of a gentleman; I have had the feeling, and I think Jane has also, that a part of his reticence is caution, that he is always watchful, subconsciously at least, lest the veneer crack, and something secretly vulgar be exposed.

I am still wondering why he came to see me today; he was sitting, gloved and spatted, in our small living room when Clara brought his card to me in the garage and I hurried in. Sitting, too, staring at our ridiculous parlor organ, with an odd look on his face.

"Haven't seen one for years," he said, in his clipped and yet deliberate manner. "Where'd you happen on that one?"

"It was here when we came," I explained.

He gave it another glance before we sat down, and then apparently dismissed it. But not entirely. Now and then he looked toward it, and once I saw a slight smile, as though back in his mind was some equally faint humorous memory. But he came to the point with a certain directness.

"You're a man of sense," he said. "I came because you've got a head on you."

"I used to have," I admitted modestly. "Lately, of course—"

He bent forward.

"Use it," he said. "Don't let this spirit bunk get you. Easiest stuff in the world to fake."

"I don't intend to let it get me."

He brushed that aside, and glanced once more at the organ.

"You take a thing like that," he said, "and start it in the dark. It gets you creepy in no time. They all use it; it used to be organs like that; now its phonographs. They say it starts the vibrations! Well, I'll tell you what it does; it gets you worked up. Sometimes it covers something the medium wants to do."

"So I imagine," I agreed.

His volubility suddenly left him then, and he seemed rather at a loss.

"Let it alone," he said. "Let well enough alone." After a pause: "There may be something, but let it alone."

And that, so far as I can make out, was the purpose of his visit. He showed a certain relief, as if he had got rid of something momentous to him, and soon after he took an abrupt departure.

Thomas tells me that another attempt was made to get into the house last night. He had left his pruning ladder outside under a tree, and found it upright against Gordon's window this morning. . . .

Later: Halliday corroborates Thomas' story, with further details. He was on the lower floor, reading, when he was disturbed by the crash of a pane of glass above. He ran upstairs, but was evidently heard. There was no one on the ladder when he got there, and a thorough search showed no one in the house.

The window was the one through which we had watched Gordon leave the house by the rope.

August 28.

It is impossible for me tonight to draw any conclusion from last evening's discovery; I have not my old faith in circumstantial evidence. I can only ask myself if an innocent man hides in his own house. . . .

Jane had one of her bad headaches last night, and at eleven o'clock I took the car and went in to the village pharmacy. It was closed, however, and I was at a loss to know what to do. In the emergency I thought of Hayward's office; like most country doctors he keeps a medicine cabinet and fills many of his own prescriptions. I went there, therefore, and rang the bell.

It took some time and several rings to rouse the housekeeper, an elderly and taciturn woman, and when she finally opened the door it was to say that the doctor was away, and to attempt to close it again. I prevented this, however, and managed to get past her and into the hall.

"I only want to get some medicine," I explained. "The cabinet is in the back office, isn't it?"

"I'm not allowed to let anybody into the office."

"Nonsense!" I said sharply. "Anyhow, you are not allowing me. I'm going."

She seemed completely at a loss, and I thought too that she was listening. With my hand on the knob of the waiting room, I caught the attentive look on her face, and found myself listening also. It seemed to me that there was somebody moving in the back office, and immediately after I caught the stealthy closing of a door somewhere. With that she appeared to relax.

"You are sure you know what you want?" she asked.

"Quite sure," I said, and went through the waiting room to the consulting office. She followed me and turned on the light, and stood there

"After All," He Said, "Give the Poor Devil His Due."

watching me intently. The room was filled with tobacco smoke, and she saw that I noticed it, for she said:

"My husband was sitting in here. I'd be glad if you don't say anything about it."

I am not suspicious, and the confession satisfied my faint feeling that something was not quite right in the house. I got the tablets from the cabinet, and being nervous about unlabeled bottles went to the desk; there, neatly piled up, were the month's bills for Hayward's professional services, written in his own untidy hand, and one not finished on the pad.

The woman was still watching me, and I managed to write my label, glue it to the bottle, and make my departure without, I think, showing that I had made any discovery whatever.

But nothing can alter my conviction that Hayward is hiding in his own house, and that he was in that back room when I rang the doorbell at something before midnight. Not even Halliday's opinion that, since Hayward is officially at home today, he had the right to be "not at home" last night.

"After all," he said, "give the poor devil his due, Skipper. He works hard, and why shouldn't he get back a day earlier than he is expected and steal a few hours to get out his bills? He has to live."

But he seems to me to be a trifle too casual about it. I admit that he puzzles me, these days.

August 31.

After all, one can find the mysterious where it does not exist. I may not yet know why Halliday considers it necessary to watch the main house at night. But I do know the reason for Livingstone's extraordinary visit.

Mrs. Livingstone, sitting with Jane during her convalescence, read the letter from Evanston, and is eager to form a similar circle, to sit in the house itself. And poor Livingstone is opposing it and is making, for some reason or other, quite a business of it. Mrs. Livingstone has apparently some absurd idea that we may receive "a clew, or something," as she vaguely puts it; and on my firm refusal departed indignantly convinced that I have lost a great opportunity to solve our mystery. . . .

Later: Halliday wants the seance! Nothing has so surprised me in years as his willingness to join the table-tippers. But I suspect in him some purpose not far removed from Mrs. Livingstone's, although just what he hopes to discover baffles me entirely.

"Why not?" he said, when I told him. "After all, we have to keep an open mind on this thing, and we've had enough already to make something of a case for the other side."

"The other side of what?"

"The other side of the veil," he explained gravely, and then, seeing my face, was obliged to laugh.

"'There is a pleasure in being mad, which none but madmen know,'" he quoted at me, "I've heard you say that Descartes advises us to seek for truth, freed from all preconceived ideas. Who are we, to stand in the way of truth?"

"And we are to search for it, sitting around a table in the dark?"

"Precisely that, Skipper," he said, with sudden gravity, and has left me to make what I can of it. . . .

Twelve days have now passed since the murder here, and the police know no more than they did on the morning of the twentieth.

Now and then a car stops outside the gate, but our curious crowds are gone. Save that some nocturnal relic-hunter has chipped a corner off the sun-dial, the place is much as it was before. All this water over the dam, and it has brought us nothing.

September 1.

I dare say there is no type of investigation in which the grave—no pun here—is so mixed with the gay, as in this particular psychic search on which we are at present engaged. For, let Halliday use it for such purposes as he will, to Jane, Edith and Mrs. Livingstone it is a deadly serious matter.

Their reactions are peculiar. Jane accepts it stoically and without surprise; it is almost as though, from the beginning she has known that it was to happen. But she is nervous.

Edith shows a peculiar and rather set-faced intensity. Whether she knows that something quite different lies behind it, or only suspects it, I do not know.

Halliday, also, is grave and quiet. He is less interested, however, in the manner of the sitting than in its dramatis personae. The list he has made out himself; Hayward, the two Livingstones, Jane, Edith and himself. On my pointing out a slight omission, namely, myself, he told me cheerfully that I belonged among the Scribes and Pharisees.

"The Scribes, anyhow," he said. "You are to sit by the red lamp and make notes. I am particularly anxious to have notes,' he added.

On the other hand, Mrs. Livingstone has entered into it with extraordinary zest. She appeared this afternoon, slightly wheezy with the heat, carrying a black curtain of some heavy material and demanding a hammer and assistance before she was fairly out of her car. As it was apparently up to me to furnish both I did so, but anything less conducive to a spiritual state of mind than the preparations which followed at the main house it would be hard to find.

To stand on a ladder in the heat and darkness of the den, and to nail up that curtain across a corner with no more ritual than if I had been hanging a picture; to place inside it a small table and a bell on it, while beside it leaned an old guitar, resurrected from the attic and minus two strings, struck me as poor psychological preparation for confronting the unknown.

The sun was low before we had finished, and as we sat resting from our labors dusk began to creep into the house. And with it came—self-created, of course—a sort of awe of that cabinet I had myself just made; it took on mystery; behind its heavy folds almost anything might happen. It brooded over the room, tall and menacing, with folds that seemed to sway with some unseen life behind them.

I left Mrs. Livingstone placing chairs about a small table and went out into the air!

The arrangements are now complete. Mrs. Livingstone has brought over a phonograph, with a collection of what appear to be most lugubrious records; she also promises Livingstone, alive or dead.

"I left him sulking," she said. "But he will feel better after he's had his dinner."

And to this frivolous measure we start the night's proceedings.

Notes Made During First Seance.

Sept. 1st; 11:15 p. m. Present: Jane, Edith, Hayward, the two Livingstones, Halliday and myself. Livingstone and Edith examining house. All outside doors locked and windows boarded. The red lamp on small stand in corner diagonally opposite cabinet and my chair beside it.

11:30 p. m. All is ready. Mrs. Livingston at end of table, next to cabinet. On her left Jane, Hayward and Mr. Livingstone. On her right, Halliday and Edith. A red silk handkerchief over lamp makes light very faint. I have started phonograph, according to instructions. I was right about it; it is playing: "Shall We Gather at the River?"

World Needs Wisdom That Comes With Age

Thank God for the old folks! They supply the balance so necessary in not only this but every day and age.

Youth may rail at the older generation for being "old fogies" and "behind the times." But snowy crowns bring a seasoning of reasoning which the snap judgment of youth lacks. Old age can hark back and profit from years of experience, while youth, though fired with enthusiasm and ambition, has yet to undergo the ordeal of fire. This "pep" in youth is, of course, a component part of life, but we also need that sageness and maturity of opinion which comes only with advanced years.

One generation, in effect, acts as a check on the other, yet it cannot be denied that youth has in the past, does now and always must, depend on its elders to impart wisdom and good advice. Especially today, when youth is inclined to be reckless, should the admonition and guidance of the old folks count for the value that it really is.

Life is as the cycle of seasons which needs its autumn as much as its spring. Spring is a beautiful expression of budding life. But autumn is none the whit less beautiful—and necessary. Though youth, like spring, gives us love and roses, it remains for autumn to produce the harvest. In other words, it is age which gives the needed mellowness to the green sprouts of rash youth.

Again we say, God bless the old folks!—Pathfinder Magazine.

Nice Men

I greatly admire a nice man. He needn't have a great amount of money, or wit, or wisdom, or ability; if he is agreeable, and fair, and polite, and honest, and treats me decently, I admire him, he is so unusual. I know such a man in Miami, Fla., and often go into his little store to admire him. He is not great, but he is not a task to anyone. On the other hand, I often see a lot of poor kin hanging around he is useful to. And he does his share in community progress; neglects none of the simple duties a good citizen should respect.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Not Quite

An American history class in one of the high schools had been having an interesting discussion of Civil war songs.

"Now," continued the teacher, "who can name a song inspired by John Brown's experience?"

"John Brown's body lies over the ocean," exclaimed one member of the class enthusiastically.

Denver Mother Tells Story

Nature controls all the functions of our digestive organs except one. We have control over that, and it's the function that causes the most trouble.

See that your children form regular bowel habits, and at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness or constipation, give them a little California Fig Syrup. It regulates the bowels and stomach and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act as Nature intends them to. It helps build up and strengthen pale, listless, underweight children. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it's purely vegetable, so you can give it as often as your child's appetite lags or he seems feverish, cross or fretful.

Leading physicians have endorsed it for 50 years, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows how mothers depend on it. A Western mother, Mrs. R. W. Stewart, 4112 Raritan St., Denver, Colorado, says: "Raymond was terribly pulled down by constipation. He got weak, fretful and cross, had no appetite or energy and food seemed to sour in his stomach. California Fig Syrup had him romping and playing again in just a few days, and soon he was back to normal weight, looking better than he had looked in months."

Protect your child from imitations of California Fig Syrup. The mark of the genuine is the word "California" on the carton.

Stumped

At the recent dinner of the All New England Brown clubs, Charles Evans Hughes told this tale to adorn a moral. An athlete, greater in brawn than in brain, carefully chose his course so that the strain might not be too heavy. In the due course of time, he, and kindred souls, enrolled in Semitic 2, the leading cinch course of the curriculum. All went well until the midyear exam. Then the athlete was stopped cold by the paper before him. In desperation he scribbled this note to be passed to one of his satellites in the back of the room: "For Pete's sake, who was Jehovah and what did he do?"—Boston Globe.

On With the Dance!

"Do you enjoy dancing?"

"Very much," answered Miss Cayenne. "A good little jazz band prevents conversation and enables a friend who might be talkative to employ his feet instead of trying to use his mind."—Washington Star.

FAMOUS FOR COMFORT

EASTER LILIES SHIPPED TO ALL PARTS OF THE GLOBE

"Say it with flowers" is a national expression now. And thanks to its all-year sunshine California is never at a loss for words. But other states cannot say so much, not while snow blankets still keep their gardens under winter wraps.

That's why growers of Easter lilies in this state have been deluged in the past few days with SOS calls from the East. Meaning, in this instance, "Save Our Speech." For remember that Easter Sunday is almost here and pure white lilies alone speak the language of the day.

So it follows that the plea for help in "saying it with flowers" has been answered and for the first time Easter lilies are being shipped by freight in carload lots from California to distant markets.

The flower beds of the San Francisco bay district are doing their part to met demands elsewhere, as evidenced by the shipment of a carload of potted, growing lilies to Salt Lake City.

California's voice will be heard far and near on Easter. Lilies from this state will be in hundreds of snow-framed windows and in their eloquent silence the blooms will speak of the warmth and beauty of California.

California's Contribution To Farm Relief

GIANNINI HALL, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

THE task of increasing, through scientific formulae, the size of the California farmers' bank account and reducing the number of mortgages, deeds of trust and promissory notes in his safe deposit box, has been undertaken by the State of California through the construction on its university campus at Berkeley of an experimental station in the tremendously vital field of agricultural economics. This new station, an imposing unit in the already dominant agricultural group at the University, will cost $500,000 and will be known as Giannini Hall. It will have an additional $1,000,000 as a working fund. Both amounts were donated by A. P. Giannini, prominent San Francisco and New York banker. All of the work of the station will be directed by the newly organized Giannini Foundation of Agricultural Economics, formed for the purpose of administering the fund.

Real Relief in Sight

Already an interesting program has been mapped out, which will concern itself chiefly with the proper selection of land by the farmer and orchardist, and the most reasonable, profitable and expeditious handling of the crops produced. In addition, such items as the broken down or the ill-favored farm or orchard will be studied and the depressing question of farm debt will be given particular consideration. In short, the station will attempt to put California agriculture and horticulture as a whole on a business basis.

Giannini Hall will be noted for its beauty as well as its great utility. It will be both a monumental structure in the modern architectural sense, and a structure that will conform closely to its natural environment of grassy undulations, mosaics of wild and formal blossoms and massive, moss festooned oaks. Its architecture and atmosphere will suggest its duties in every respect, from the carved figurations of farm activities and energies that will adorn its exterior and its entrances, to the quiet calm of its secluded studies and library rooms.

In general dimensions the building will be 280 feet over all, 6[illegible] feet through the center and 58 feet high. Each of the wings will be 63 feet wide. There will be a ground, main, second and third floor.

The building will make up the completement of the imposing agricultural square from which Agriculture Hall, the main building, looks out toward the West. It will resemble Hilgard Hall, another unit, but only in so far as it is necessary to make the units of the square conform generally. In every other sense it will be an individual and distinctive structure. Two noteworthy features will be conventionalized graven figures symbolic of the energies of agricultural economics, placed along the eastern facades, and a two story recessed portico, set off by decorative piers on the west front.

The structure will house many diverse activities, all of them relating to the present pressing farm burdens. On the first or main floor will be the offices of the Foundation Director and the Dean of the College of Agriculture. This floor will also contain class rooms and experimental rooms of the State Division of Forestry. The second floor will be given over to the general offices of the Foundation, a department of forestry administration and a department of farm management. The third floor will contain offices of the National Park Service, the California Farm Bureau Federation, a department of irrigation investigation, a forestry experimental station and a unit of the Department of Entomology. The ground floor will contain archives and storage space.

All Agriculture Helped

Through a decided change in the formal arrangement of corridors the building will achieve a new maximum of roominess and light. This change allows for a tier of small rooms, ideally suited for offices and on the opposite side, a tier of larger rooms for class and experimentation purposes.

The campus of the University of California is one of the most beautiful and distinctive in the world and Giannini Hall will face its greatest beauties. The landscape, broken by the great oaks that abound here, is perennially green. As a matter of pure convenience and utility the Hall is ideally situated, facing the main arteries of the student movement and being directly in the center of university life.

Giannini Hall is to be completed within a year and a half, or in time for the opening of the Fall semester of 1930.

With the completion of its agricultural square at the University of California, the state will be in a position to take care of every phase of agriculture from the moment that the farmer or grower starts in search of a suitable piece of land until his crops are placed on the tables of the ultimate consumers throughout the world.

INTRODUCING NADINE

Dear Friends:

It gives me great pleasure to introduce my good friend Nadine to you.

This is her first time in the newspaper. However, she feels quite at home. Perhaps you would like to know more about her. If so, just look for this strip on this page each Friday. She goes to school with me every day. She has such interesting characteristics I thought it might be interesting to you, as well as myself, to make a strip, so you might enjoy her elusive qualities as much as I have. She has a sister, mother, and plenty of friends, which you will see later during the series of strips.

I hope I can illustrate my pictures so that you may enjoy her as much as I do. I live in Daly City and go to Jefferson Union high school.

Yours truly,

LILLIAN EWERS.

(The Daly City Record takes great pleasure in presenting Nadine to its readers, and hopes that they will enjoy her antics as often as Miss Ewers sees fit to depict them.)

A DRAG BUT NO PULL

A college student got a job in a lumber camp and was told to attach himself to a cross-cut saw, the other end of which was in charge of an old lumberman.

As the day progressed, the student weakened steadily, and finally the old man yelled out:

"Son, I don't mind your ridin' on this here saw, but if it's jest the same to you, I wish you'd keep your feet off the ground."

Commander Byrd is said to have discovered 14 peaks. But maybe they are only the famous 14 points gone south.

BROADCAST JAMBOREE TO BE HELD NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT

Many young people of Daly City, as well as some others resident in other parts of San Mateo county, are going to attend the dance to be held at the Hotel Whitcomb roof garden in San Francisco on Saturday night of next week. The "Broadcast Jamboree" is the title of this already much talked of social affair, and it is being sponsored by the Alberian branch of the Young Ladies' Institute and Pioneer Council of the Young Men's Institute.

Considerable preparation has been made for this pleasant affair, and, as it is to be the first week end dance to be held after Easter Sunday, assurances have been received of the attendance of the largest crowd of young people of the season. Mr. Pete Butti, who is well known to the dancing set all throughout San Mateo county, and his orchestra of jazz symphonists, are to furnish the music for dancing.

The membership of the Alberian Institute is derived almost in its entirety from young ladies of San Francisco who reside in different sections from Twenty-ninth to the county line, and are well known to the young people of this city and other parts of the county. Others are residents of Daly City, as also are some of the young men affiliated in the Pioneer Council.

Miss Madeleine Cotter, for the Alberians, and Mr. Harry Hunt, for the Pioneers, are at the head of the committee in charge of arrangements. Other well known young ladies assisting on the various committees are Mrs. Katherine Lombardero and the Misses Dorothy Smith, Anita Arata, Anita Horr, Rosemarie Vetter, Mary Sturica, Ethel Brannan, Virginia Freitas, Florence Freitas, Beatrice Buchignani, Lena Buchignani, Roseanne Regli, Mary Flahaven, Bernice Dunphy, Alice Clancy, Grace Dillon, Maude Everson, Ethyl Degliantoni, Thelma Varni, Helen Kleyn, Helene Cimino, Pauline Cimino, Evelyn Peter, Bernice Grand and Eleanor Pearson.

Among the active members of Pioneer Council on the same committee are Roy Norton, James Hickey, Charles Crowley, Thomas Bolts, Paul Zink, James Murphy, Harold Crane, William Murphy, James Sullivan, Bernard Flanagan, Eugene Lynch, Robert Egan, Lawrence Quinn, Joseph Growney, Walter Lynch, Edward Mullane, George Bartman, Matthew McLaughlin, Walter Vortman, William Sullivan, Lyndon Smith, Michael Timmons, Frank Norton, Harry Tattenham, Frank Sullivan, Eugene Cruciani and Bert Larkin.

USE OF GAS GROWS

According to a survey made recently by the American Gas Association, more than 14 million American homes are now served by gas utilities. In these homes approximately 13 million gas cooking ranges are in use.

During 1928 four hundred and ninety billion cubic feet of manufactured gas was sold, a new high record. Household users absorbed 338 billion cubic feet of the total, with industry employing almost all the rest.

One of the outstanding causes of the increase is the favor into which gas heating units have come. Old style coal burning furnaces are expensive, inefficient and dirty. Heating units using gas are entirely automatic, efficient and have the rare virtue of cleanliness.

Maybe those Spanish troops rebelled at Valencia because that song had been introduced over there.

YOUR BANK AND HOW TO USE IT

The International Banking Department

The service of the International Banking Department of the modern bank is superimposed on what might be termed an economic and political map of the whole world. Internationally speaking, this department is the eyes of the bank and they must be eyes that see everywhere at once. They must scan the political complexion of the Central American republics while at the same time they study the crop conditions of Indo-China. Every change in goverment everywhere is carefully watched, whether it be the dethroning or abdiction of a king in Albania or a shift of cabinet ministers in Switzerland. The effect of a swift climate change on a Balkan wheat belt is as carefully card-indexed as any domestic account.

All of these things, with their possibilities of inflation or deflation, money panics on the one hand or enhanced stability on the other, have a direct effect on exchange transactions and on the protection of the financial rights of the bank's customers who have interests outside of the United States.

Those eyes of the bank must see all of the economic and other conditions surrounding every export and import shipment in which the bank is interested, and the possible effects of such conditions. Strikes, revolutions and disasters often govern the ability of a shipper to dispatch his goods or a consignee to receive them and vitally affect the flow and the rates of exchange.

The personal service of the department is as far-flung and effective as the commercial service. If an investor in Berkeley or Alhambra wants a good foreign security, which by the way usually sell at attractive dividend rates, the International Banking Department through its investment service will obtain such security for him. If the purser of a steamer has a collection of foreign money paid for transportation or other service at Penang, Pago, Sydney, or any other foreign port, he may turn such moneys over to the department and receive American coin or currency for them at the prevailing exchange rates.

If a shipowner has one of his vessels placed under admiralty libel, which means that the vessel is being held by the goverment for the payment of a debt, the department will obtain the release of such libel upon the advancement of sufficient repayment guarantees from the owner or consignee of vessel or cargo. The department will also obtain insurance on bonds, notes, personal valuables, merchandise, ship freight and all other items relating to its handling of foreign accounts.

The International Banking Department is a discount market and deals freely with other discount markets. That means that it will buy negotiable paper from its customers before such paper matures and will sell to like markets, also before maturity. Often a customer of the department wants to realize at once on a draft, such as a trade acceptance, whereas such obligation may not be due for weeks or months. He will cash the paper through the department and will receive its face value minus the rate that the bank will charge him for the accomodation. This rate is known as a discount and is determined by the ruling cost of borrowing money. International shippers use this accommodation freely in order to keep themselves adequately financed at all times.

The International Banking Department may keep such discounted obligation and collect it when it is due or may sell it in another discount market.

FIRST AID TRAINING SAVES SHOCK VICTIM

Charles Butchee, of Lockhart, Miss., is alive today because J. J. Gartman, section lineman of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was skilled in first aid work, having taken the course offered telephone employes throughout the country. Butchee and his cousin were riding along the street in an automobile when a loose wire hanging from a street arc light struck him about the head and shoulders. He was instantly rendered unconscious through contact with a live wire, but the telephone lineman, who was passing in his car at the time, went at once to his aid, and because of his prompt action in giving artificial respiration, Butchee recovered.

Helen Hicks, Long Island school girl, is the sensation of the Florida golf season, having defeated Miss Glenna Collett, national champion, 2 and 1.

EASTER

The day of resurrection!
Earth, tell it out abroad,
The passover of God
From death to life eternal,
From this world to the sky,
Our Christ has brought us over,
With hymns of victory.

Our hearts be pure from evil,
That we may see aright
The Lord in rays eternal
Of resurrected light.
And, listening to His accents,
May hear, so calm and plain,
His own "All Hail!" and hearing,
May raise the victor strain.

Now let the heavens be joyful!
Let earth her song begin;
Let the round world keep triumph,
And all there is therein.
Invisible and visible,
Their notes let all things blend,
For Christ the Lord hath risen,
Our joy that hath no end.
